BOHALL ON TRIAL FOR SECOND TIME

Defendant is Charged With First Degree Murder For Killing His Brother, Thornton.

MANY WITNESSES ARE CALLED

Theory of Defense is That Shooting Was Accidental.—Complete Jury is Secured.

The case of Garfield Bohall, charged with killing his brother, Thornton Bohall, last fall, was called in the circuit court this morning for the second trial. Bohall was tried at the last term of court, but the jury failed to agree on a verdict.

The greater part of the day was spent in getting a jury acceptable to both the attorneys of the state and the defendant. It was feared that there might be some difficulty in finding a jury and a large special venire was summoned. Eleven places on the jury were filled this morning, but the twelfth juror was not selected until three hours after the others had been agreed upon. The jury box was finally filled about two o'clock, with the following jurors: Herman Brandt, George D. Summa, Woody McNelly, Granville Tabor, Elmer Henderson, Charles W. Weddell, August Bobb, Albert M. Singer, John Beavers, Charles Huber, Charles Larbring and Herman Nierman.

The defendant shot his brother the later part of November when he attempted to separate his brothers, Thornton and Joseph, who were engaged in a quarrel. The three brothers were at the home of the father, William Bohall, on Lynn and Laurel streets, when the fratricide occurred. During the afternoon the brothers entered the barn and Garfield told his little son to get some corn for the chickens. Their mother, who was nearby, told them that there was plenty of feed in the chicken yard, but Joseph said that the boy should get the corn. Thornton declared that the boy should not, and the quarrel ensued, which continued for several moments.

Mrs. Bohall asked Garfield to separate his brothers, and it is said one of them struck at Garfield. In the struggle a pistol which was carried by Garfield was discharged and the bullet struck his brother, Thornton, just over the left eye, causing his death a short time afterwards.

Bohall declares that the weapon was discharged accidentally and that he did not have any intentions, whatever, of injuring his brother. He asserts that he was cleaning the revolver and that when he was called by his mother he carried the gun with him, but not with the intention of using it. The state is prosecuting the case upon the theory that he went into the house for the purpose of getting the pistol, and that it was not fired by accident.

As Bohall is charged with murder in the first degree, he has been in jail since the time of the murder. It is believed that the remainder of the week will be required to complete the case.

Miss Mae Love went to Osgood Tuesday where she has a position in the public schools.

IT IS TIME FOR KERN TO SPEAK

Senator B. F. Shively Indirectly But Emphatically Denies Old Bribery Charges.

SPOKE HERE LAST NIGHT

Opening Democratic Campaign.— Fair Sized Audience, But Little Enthusiasm.

Senator B. F. Shively, recognized as one of the leading Democratic orators of Indiana, opened the party's campaign in this county in a speech at the Majestic Tuesday evening.

He was greeted by a fair sized audience but it did not come up to expectations and was lacking in enthusiasm. His appearance was marked by no demonstration and during the nearly two hours that he spoke there were only two or three ripples of applause.

Before the meeting the band played on the streets. During the speaking several prominent Democrats occupied the stage. They were Judge J. H. Shea, Thomas Honan, County Chairman E. P. Elsner, A. Davison, J. H. Matlock, Charles Adams, of Redding township, James Clements, of Brownstown, and J. G. Offutt and wife of Crothersville. Senator Shively was introduced by Mr. Honan. The feature of the speech that attracted most attention was his indirect reference to the old Kern bribery charges made following Senator Shively's selection by the Democratic caucus. He made no direct mention of Kern or his candidacy but near the close of his speech declared emphatically that up to this time there has never been any evidence of sinister outside influences in Democratic legislative or senatorial caucuses. The statement came at the close of remarks praising the Australian ballot system and its secrecy, and this was taken also as a defense of the manner of voting in the memorable caucus, as it will be recalled that Mr. Kern's adherents denounced a secret ballot as affording opportunity for the violation of pledges. The thrust at Kern was readily construed by the audience.

Mr. Shively devoted the greater part of his speech to a discussion of the tariff question, advancing the old well worn Democratic arguments in advocacy of a revenue only tariff and in denunciation of protection which he considered a nuisance of taxing power. He would not admit that protection was responsible but acknowledged that the country is prosperous. He attacked special interests and had considerable to say regarding the cost of government.

During his stay in Seymour Senator Shively was the guest of Judge Shea, the two men being particular friends. Judge Shea, it will be recalled took an active interest in the Shively candidacy.

This store will be closed from 5:30 p. m. Wednesday to 5:30 p. m. Thursday on account of holiday.

LARGE AUDIENCE

Greeted Evangelist Roy L. Brown Last Night.

In spite of counter attractions Evangelist Roy L. Brown was greeted by a large audience last night at the Christian church. He is one of those rapid-fire speakers who carry an audience from one climax to another, and people are complimenting his sermons highly and the work he is doing.

Mr. Brown has traveled extensively in seven different countries, besides covering many states in our own country, hence his sermons are constantly made interesting by pertinent illustrations taken from the various walks of life. Humor, pathos, and sound sense make each discourse attractive. Hear him tonight on "Why I am not ashamed of the Gospel." Come and bring a friend.

REV. WILSON WHITNEY

Resigns Pastorate of Martinsville Baptist Church.

Rev. Wilson Whitney presented his resignation to the congregation of the Baptist church Sunday morning and the same was accepted. Rev. and Mrs. Whitney came here from Bedford when Rev. Whitney was called to the pastorate of the local church twenty-one months ago. They have made many friends during the time of their residence in this city who will regret to see them locate elsewhere. Rev. Whitney is a strong man both in the pulpit and out of it, and has been a great factor for good during the time that he has been a minister in this city.

Rev. and Mrs. Whitney have not completed plans for the future and he does not know where he will take up pastoral labors again.—Martinsville Reporter.

The Rev. Mr. Whitney conducted a series of revival meetings at the First Baptist church in this city several years ago and is known here by many of the members of that congregation.

MARRIED.

PRICE—CARTER

Virgil A. Price, of Scottsburg, and Miss Grace Carter, of this city, were married at the home of the Rev. Chas. Seifers, in Scottsburg Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 4th, at 3:30 o'clock. The Rev. Mr. Seifers performed the marriage ceremony. Only a very few relatives were present at the wedding as the intention of the bridal couple was to keep their marriage a secret, but their many friends in Seymour became suspicious and finally secured a complete confession from the bride, so the wedding announcement followed. The groom is a barber in the Seifer's shop at Crothersville and the bride is quite well known in Seymour, having made her home with her sister, Mrs. Fred Robins, on W. Second street for several years. They will go to housekeeping in Crothersville in the near future where the best wishes and congratulations of their many friends will follow them.

VETERANS ATTEND

DISTRICT MEETING

Ellsworth Post Well Represented at Regimental Reunions Held at Columbus.

COMMANDER ASBURY SPEAKS

Members of the Relief Corps Also Attend.—Boys' Drum Corps of Brownstown There.

A number of farmers interested in the horticultural demonstration at the Stanfield orchard have received word that the meeting will be held on Thursday, October 27th. The first announcement of the meeting stated that it would be held on the 14th. The demonstration will be given under the direction of Purdue University and representatives of that institution will be here to give lectures and demonstrations regarding the growing of apples and the care of orchards in this vicinity.

The Stanfield orchard was selected as the place for holding the meeting, as it has been cared for during the past year according to the directions of the experimental station of Purdue University. J. M. Masters, who has had charge of the orchard, has made every effort to care for the trees in the most scientific and practicable manner, as he believed that better results could be obtained and that the orchard would be more profitable. The trees have been sprayed under the supervision of the University representatives, the ground cared for as they suggested and every precaution taken to protect the trees and the fruit from injury. As a result the orchard produced the largest crop it has ever had, and the quality of the apples was far above that of other orchards where the trees were not given proper attention.

In order to show that it was profitable to spray the trees, several rows of apple trees in the Stanfield orchard were not given any attention or care, whatever, and the apples upon these trees are of far inferior quality to those upon the other trees which have been sprayed.

Much interest has been shown in the orchard and many farmers and fruitmen have given it much attention. The horticultural meeting on the 27th will be attended by many people from this part of the state, as it is being widely advertised. Lunch will be served on the grounds and the lectures and demonstrations will be given in both the morning and afternoon.

National Menace

Banker Criticises Conduct of American People

By JOS. T. TALBERT, Vice President of National City Bank, New York

XTRAVAGANCE has become not only a national vice but is in fact becoming a national menace. There does not appear anywhere to exist in the conduct of national, municipal or individual affairs, that appreciation of the economical and prudent use of resources and that adjustment of expenditures to means and incomes which always has been found necessary to the support of prosperity and to the maintenance of a condition of solvency.

We are squandering on pleasure vehicles annually sums of money running into hundreds of millions of dollars. The initial cost of automobiles to American users amounts to not less than $250,000,000 a year. The upkeep and other necessary expenditures, as well as incidentals, which would not otherwise be incurred, amount to at least as much more. This vast sum is equivalent in actual economic waste each year to more than the value of property destroyed in the San Francisco fire—perhaps to twice as much. This sum, as large as it is, does not include the whole economic loss growing out of this single item of indulgence. The thousands of young and able-bodied men employed in manufacturing machines and in running and caring for cars are all withdrawn from productive usefulness; they become consumers of our diminishing surplus products and constitute an added burden to the producers. The economic influence of this withdrawal from the producing and addition to the consuming class, is bound to be manifested in a tendency to higher prices. Its effect already must be considerable, and is comparable only to the maintenance of an enormous standing army.

Thousands upon thousands of our people, frenzied by desire for pleasure and crazed by passion to spend, have mortgaged their homes, pledged their life insurance policies, withdrawn their hard-earned savings from banks to buy automobiles; and have thereby converted their modest assets into expanding and devouring liabilities. The spectacle is astounding.

Protect Against Awful Forest Fires

By ALEX. TRUESDALE

Speaking of the conservation of our natural resources, what greater resource is at stake than the welfare of our hardy pioneers?

Up in the wilderness, away from the pathway of civilization, are men with brains and brawn. Their wives are with them and their children are growing up in the same surroundings that our forefathers had.

They are making sacrifices and enduring hardships and privations.

Usually they are men of very limited means, these hardy pioneers who hew out a home in the almost impenetrable wild and make fertile farms in the most unfavorable sections for agriculture.

Year after year the newspapers are filled with graphic accounts of disastrous forest fires in the northern and western states of the Union.

The flames, sweeping over vast areas, take their toll from the human race, and the millions of dollars' worth of timber that is destroyed robs this and future generations of a priceless gift. The power to save this lies in human hands.

We protect our city homes, factories and other buildings from fire and riots; why can't we protect our brother, the builder for civilization?

Why can't the governor of an afflicted state issue a call to arms?

The effect would be magical, the cost slight. How thankful we would all feel, how grateful humanity would be for the work and the heroism of our boys in khaki if they were called to the front to fight an enemy of such magnitude!

Roosters and Dogs Nuisance in Cities

By WM. H. BIED
Cincinnati

The neighborhood in which I live would be a very quiet and desirable one were it not for the fact that about 75 per cent. of the people have chicken coops planted on the rear of their lots and about the same percentage own dogs.

Those who are too poor to own one dog manage to own two.

With the yelping of the dogs in the fore part of the night and the roosters letting loose with their clarion notes at dawn, one can imagine what a poor chance a light sleeper has to get the necessary rest to equip him for the following day's work.

A great many of the dog owners are not paying taxes either, if the truth were known.

Many dogs are running loose, and there is not a muzzle on one of them.

What are the police doing that they cannot see this evil and correct it? Nothing is done until some one is bitten.

If these chicken and dog owners wish to run farms, they should go where they belong—into the country.

Many Benefits Derived From Boxing

By MYER HALPER

I believe that boxing is in a large sense responsible for the fact that the young men of America and Great Britain are superior to the young men of Mexico or Spain. If two young Americans or Englishmen have a quarrel, it is quickly settled by a fair fist fight. But let two Mexicans (although not all are so) get into a quarrel and knives are likely to flash and inside of five or ten minutes one or probably both of them are hustled off to the hospital. In Mexico there are hardly ever any prize fights.

Many of our prominent citizens are firm advocates of all athletic games and exercises and boxing is certainly as healthful a sport as football, cricket, basketball and many other of our most popular sports. And by contrasting the number of fatalities on both sides boxing is seen not to be a bit more dangerous.

To be a good boxer one must be clean physically and to be clean physically one cannot be unclean morally.

There is nothing like our old-fashioned fair fist fights to test a youth's mettle under the greater pressure later on in life.

Advertising Talks

DECREASES COST OF LIVING

Advertising Lessens Price of Goods by Providing a Market—Is a Civilizing Influence.

The following letter addressed to the editor of the New York Times is signed by William H. Ingersoll of the Ingersoll Watch company, well known in advertising circles as an enthusiastic believer in the possibilities of making advertising a correct science: "Under the head 'Advertising' in a recent issue appears a letter by one of your correspondents purporting to show: First, that advertising is waste when it is applied to the necessities of life which would have to be purchased anyway, and, second, that it increases the cost of living when it is applied to what the correspondent considers to be outside of the category of necessities.

"Superficially, his reasoning appears plausible, but in reality it is fallacious, because it overlooks the fact that the consumer of any article always bears two distinct items of cost when he buys it. The first of these is the cost of production. The second is the cost of getting it from the producer to the consumer. Advertising has taken the large place that it has in the second of these two costs because it reduces the cost of distributing goods and therefore reduces the total cost to the consumer, or more frequently than otherwise accomplishes this. It is a competitive weapon considered in this sense and is used because when well used it gives a producer an advantage over competitors who use the more expensive agencies for distributing their products.

"Advertising frequently lessens the cost of goods very materially by providing a market, allowing production on a greatly magnified scale, thereby permitting economies which smaller production would not allow. A large enough market to make the dollar watch a possibility would not have been attainable except through advertising, yet this article has saved money to millions of those who have purchased.

"It is probably true, as your correspondent claims, that advertising on the whole does increase the cost of living by creating new wants, but this is no condemnation of advertising to any man who believes in civilization, because the prime difference between the savage and the civilized man is that the former has but two or three wants, while the latter has many. Advertising is a civilizing influence, because it increases the number of man's wants. It is a human benefaction in its legitimate use."

THE PIKER'S CREED.

By H. S. Bunting.

I.
We have nothing to advertise.

II.
We don't believe in advertising our line.

III.
Advertising doesn't pay us—we recommend it to our customers.

IV.
When business is good we don't have to advertise.

V.
When business is poor we can't afford it.

Need Only Tell the People.

There are many merchants who believe that money spent in advertising is like charity, because everybody in their territory knows them and the goods they sell. Yet we venture the assertion that a large percentage of the business the mail-order house draw from rural communities is due to the fact that the purchaser does not know he can get the goods as advantageously from his home merchant. The country merchant can advertise with the same proportionate success in his local paper that the department store gains by advertising in the city papers by simply telling the people what he has in stock and what he is charging for it.

Simple Copy Language.

The two grandest messages ever delivered to humanity are simply put. The Sermon on the Mount is written in language a child can understand.

Lincoln's Gettysburg speech is within the reach of everyone's grasp; it is the simplest arrangement of plain, short words ever brought together, and this very simpleness adds to the sublimity of the message. Every ad. writer should study it carefully to give the greatest power to the message with which he "dresses" his raw material.

Change Your Advertising.

There is no business that cannot be increased and benefited by advertising. No class of advertising pays as well as a well written newspaper ad. There is no work you could do that would bring you as good returns as to use 30 minutes' time each day in the study of advertising, if you are in business. The great trouble with most advertisers is that that they write an ad. invoicing their stock in trade and expect by letting it stand week after week in the country newspaper to get direct returns from it.

RULES FOR ADVERTISERS

The first rule for effective advertising is "Simplicity." Let there be simplicity in the way the text is written, the illustrations made; in the designing, in the color scheme. The only relative to "Simplicity" is "Vulgarity," and they're not on speaking terms. They are twin sisters, however, so that if you are not courting one you must be under the spell of the other.

The second rule is "Directness." Come right to the point. Make the statement decisive, positive—just as if you believed it yourself. It can be done without presumption. You do not have to apologize for merit in your goods, though your statement must be as convincing as your product is good.

The third rule is "Have Individuality." You can do this without offending simplicity and directness, and yet remain consistent to them. Don't blindly follow the leaders.

The fourth rule is "Be a Hardy Annual." Don't expect to keep your business running for ten years by advertising in one. You will have to keep it up and make it better each time. The methods of last year are out of date this year. The buying public is independent and not chained to you. It is your task to keep them interested and convinced that your goods are the goods.

DOES ADVERTISING PAY?

Man Who Does Not Believe in It Sets Up His Judgment Against Best Business Men of World.

The man who conducts his business on the theory that it doesn't pay and he can't afford to advertise, sets up his judgment in opposition to that of all the best business men of the world. Says an experienced advertising authority: "With a few years' experience in conducting a small business on a few thousand dollars' capital, he assumes to know more than those whose hourly transactions aggregate more than his do in a year, and who have made their millions by pursuing a course that he says doesn't pay."

If advertising doesn't pay, why is it that the most successful merchants of every town, large or small, are the heaviest advertisers? If it does not pay, why do the largest business firms in the world spend millions in that way? Is it because they want to donate those millions to the newspaper and magazine publishers, and the manufacturers and jobbers of advertising specialties or because they don't know as much about business as the six-for-a-dollar merchant who says money spent in advertising is thrown away or donated to the man to whom it is paid? Such talk is simply ridiculous, says the American Stationer, and it requires more than the average patience to discuss the proposition of whether advertising pays or not with that kind of a man.

A "Marathon" Sentence.

A correspondence of Printers' Ink in San Francisco sends a "reader," taken from an ad. of a dancing school at Salem, Mass., which he believes to be one of the longest sentences ever printed in an advertisement. It appeared under the head of "New Thoughts and Theory in Dancing," and was as follows:

"Is not the freedom and harmony which nature reveals on every hand, even in inanimate things, like the swaying trees and rippling streams, and floating clouds, the rain drops and snow flakes, enough to convince us that our Creator intended us to be glorious unconstrained agents of activity with the physical part so thoroughly educated and exercised that it can at any and all times through life become an enthusiastic and expressive co-partner of the great controlling agent, known as mind, which in its turn is controlled by that great impulse of our being which is ourself—the ego—the soul, that moral principle which constitutes our nature, and from which arise all the noble impulses which shape our ideals and promote worthy ambitions."

The Architect of Memory.

A business must be seen and known. Advertising is the architect of memory. Its sole first aim is to fix some proposition in the mind, whether a trade mark, a bargain, a name, an idea. It is the polished steel rails over which salesmanship rides to success. A business must be seen and known. Put a business in a cellar, without windows, and say nothing about it and you might light it ever so brilliantly and carry the finest goods and the only result would be a stack of rent receipts and light bills. There is no business without advertising, as there is no advertising without business.

The reason your rival can afford to advertise more than you do is because he is doing more business.

MISSSES' AND LADIES' COATS.

Nos. 5099 and 5104, All Seams Allowed.—With the approach of cool weather the coat becomes a very important part of the wardrobe. The new styles have many features which differ from those of the spring and summer. We show an advanced model in the accompanying illustration. The coat is semi-fitting. The front forms a panel, joined to the sides by long French darts. In like manner the back is seamless in the center, the shaping being accomplished by means of long seams, similar to the French darts over at one side. The coat buttons over at one side. The pattern (5099) is cut in sizes 14, 16 and 18 years.

There have been several changes in the coats of the coming season, which mark them as different from those of the past summer. One of these is in their being closed much more snugly, and another is in the arrangement of the collar and cuffs. The coat is in 36-inch length. It is fitted by means of long shoulder darts and by corresponding seams in the back. There is a side-back section and a side-front section which meet under the arm. The neck is finished by a collar differing slightly from the familiar shawl collar in being more narrow and not so long. The sleeves are the usual coat sleeve, gathered at the shoulder. The pattern (5104) is cut in sizes 32 to 44 inches bust measure.

To procure this pattern send 10 cents to "Pattern Department" of this paper. Write name and address plainly, and be sure to give size and number of pattern.

CHILD'S YOKE DRESS.

No. 5097, All Seams Allowed.—As the time arrives for little girls to return to the schoolroom it is one of the mother's tasks to select the dresses which they will wear. These must be simple and suited to the season. For the lightweight woolen fabrics, which are the best for general wear, the design submitted herewith is very nice. It has quite a deep yoke, and the balance of the waist is attached to this, gathered along the edge of the yoke and plain on the shoulders. The skirt is simply gathered, and is attached to the waist beneath a belt. The sleeves are of bishop design. The pattern (5097) is cut in sizes 2 to 12 years. To make the dress of the medium size will require 2 1/2 yards of material 36 inches wide.

To procure this pattern send 10 cents to "Pattern Department" of this paper. Write name and address plainly, and be sure to give size and number of pattern.

THE COLONEL UP IN THE AIR

Roosevelt Succumbed to Temptation of Aerial Flight.

WENT UP IN HOXSEY'S PLANE

As the Merest Incident to an Unusually Busy Day at St. Louis, Roosevelt Took a Trip in an Airship, Afterward Declaring It Was the Finest Experience He Ever Had—in Illinois Today and in Indiana Tomorrow.

St. Louis, Oct. 12.—Well, the colonel did it, by George! He went up in the air. Like a good many others, he has succumbed to the temptations of flying. Late Tuesday afternoon Mr. Roosevelt made his first flight with Arch Hoxsey. In a Wright biplane he encircled the field twice, and remained in the air three minutes and twenty seconds. When he came down to earth the colonel explained that it was the bulliest experience he had ever gone through. He had not expected to do it.

"It was the finest experience I ever had," he shouted to the crowd of cheering thousands. "I would have liked to have stayed up an hour." He shook hands with Hoxsey, thanking him for the ride, and then he disappeared in a cloud of dust.

This was only one of dozens of interesting things the colonel did Tuesday. He rushed and whizzed and flew about just as he used to do. St. Louis folks who attempted to follow his course gave it up as a bad job. It was impossible. When it comes to mixing pleasure with business you cannot pass the colonel. He made three big speeches, morning, noon and night. In the Coliseum, before an enormous audience at night, he hammered away at his notions of tariff making. In the morning he took up the matter of control of the waterway terminals and keeping them away from the railroads. At a luncheon before the Traffic club at noon he spoke in favor of government control and supervision of the big railroads.

It was just after luncheon that the colonel started out for the Kinloch aviation field. A long string of motor cars carrying the committees and the reporters whirled along behind him, taking the dust for eighteen miles. On reaching the aviation field, Roosevelt at once rode into the center of the enclosure. While he sat in an auto with Governor Hadley, Arch Hoxsey, who had been flying, came over and spoke to the colonel quietly.

"I'd like to have you for a passenger," murmured Hoxsey. The colonel looked about and above. There was no wind and the conditions looked to be right. He had not intended to fly, however, because he said a long time ago that he'd just as soon remain on the ground. Suddenly he began to remove his coat. He doffed his dusty black sombrero. "You're not going, are you, colonel?" asked Governor Hadley, anxiously.

The colonel looked about him. "By George, I think I will," said he, and stepped out of his motor car.

Hoxsey's biplane was nearby and the colonel had reached it in a jiffy. He devoted all his attention to Hoxsey and the jiggers that worked the plane. He sat on the left side of Hoxsey. Somebody passed him a cap and the colonel put it on. He was ready for the swoop. The aeroplane rose gently and gradually to a height of 100 feet. As it rose it picked up more speed, and before he knew it, Mr. Roosevelt and the aviator were swooping over the heads of the crowds. The biplane ascended in a complete circle and made a long loop. The colonel waved his hands to the folks beneath. He called to them, but the hum of the motor choked his words. In three minutes and twenty seconds the plane glided back to its original position near the colonel's machine. The crowd swarmed toward him.

He uttered exclamations that came so fast you could not tell what he was saying. He kept "By Georging" and said "Fine" at least hundred times. He was so overwhelmed that he could not describe his sensations of being in the air.

Today he left for Peoria to speak at a dinner before the Knights of Columbus, and tomorrow will cut across Indiana, making speeches at Veedersburg, Covington, Crawfordsville, Lafayette, Colfax, Lebanon, Indianapolis, Muncie, Anderson and Richmond.

MUST BELIEVE IT.

When Well-Known Seymour People Tell It So Plainly.

When public endorsement is made by a representative citizen of Seymour the proof is positive. You must believe it. Read this testimony. Every backache sufferer, every man, woman or child with any kidney trouble will find profit in the reading.

Mrs. Sheridan Burge, Third and Blish streets, Seymour, Ind., says: "I am enjoying excellent health at the present time, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills. I was so miserable that I about gave up all hope of ever being well. The pains in my back almost drove me frantic and I lost in weight until I was but a mere shadow of my former self. I doctored faithfully and tried remedies of various kinds, but not until I took Doan's Kidney Pills, did I get relief."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster—Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

READY AT LAST

Wellman's Aerial Trip Across the Atlantic to Begin Today.

Atlanta, Oct. 12.—Members of the crew of the dirigible "America," in which Walter Wellman hopes to cross the ocean, have written farewell messages to their families and friends, and an attempt will be made to start the big gasbag today. Hotel men and other backers of the Wellman enterprise here are insisting on trial trips about the city for the benefit of visitors, but both Wellman and Chief Engineer Melvin Vaniman have announced that everything is ready to attempt the over-ocean flight and that they will not return to earth if the winds and air currents are favorable for the big flight.

The Demon of the Air

is the germ of LaGrippe, that, breathed in, brings suffering to thousands. Its after effects are weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the splendid tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. If suffering, try them. Only 50c. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by Andrews-Schwenk Drug Co.

Picked Lock of Cell Door.

Gary, Ind., Oct. 12.—Gary's first jail delivery took place when Fred Miller, a young hotel clerk, in two hours' time picked the lock of his cell door and, after filing his way through a screen, made his escape. He sawed his way out while the rest of the prisoners were trying to attract the attention of the lockup keeper. Miller was brought back to Gary from Akron, O., and is charged with robbing the Gary hotel safe of $500 last May.

Saved from the Grave.

"I had about given up hope, after nearly four years of suffering from a severe lung trouble," writes Mrs. M. L. Dix, of Clarksville, Tenn. "Often the pain in my chest would be almost unbearable and I could not do any work, but Dr. King's New Discovery has made me feel like a new person. It's the best medicine made for the throat and lungs." Obstinate coughs, stubborn colds, hay fever, la grippe, asthma, croup, bronchitis and hemorrages, hoarseness and whooping cough yield quickly to this wonderful medicine. Try it. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Andrews-Schwenk Drug Co.

Another Big Oil Project.

Anderson, Ind., Oct. 12.—Oil excitement, almost equal in interest to the first days of natural gas, is prevailing between this city and Frankton, nine miles northwest, because the Waska Oil company of Pennsylvania has leased nearly 1,000 acres of land and will prospect for oil.

Worse than Bullets.

Bullets have often caused less suffering to soldiers than the eczema L. W. Harriman, Burlington, Me., got in the army, and suffered for forty years. "But Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured me when all else failed," he writes. Greatest healer for sores, ulcers, boils, burns, cuts, wounds, bruises and piles. 25c at Andrews-Schwenk Drug Co.

Charged With Embezzlement.

Indianapolis, Oct. 12.—Charged with having embezzled $3,000 belonging to the Central Brokerage company, Harry Owen is being sought by the police.

The Call of the Blood for purification, finds voice in pimples, boils, sallow complexion, a jaundiced look, moth patches and blotches on the skin—all signs of liver trouble. But Dr. King's New Life Pills make rich red blood; give clear skin, rosy cheeks, fine complexion, health. Try them. 25c at Andrews-Schwenk Drug Co.

DIRE NEED OF FIRE VICTIMS

Rainy River Refugees in Danger of Starvation.

A CALL FOR INSTANT RELIEF

It Is Not Money That Is Needed Just Now in the Fire-Swept Region, but Food and Clothing, as the Refugees Have Been Stripped of Everything—Official Report Makes Death List One Thousand.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Forester Graves has received the following message from Supervisor Marshall of the forest service at Cass lake as to the great forest fires raging on the American-Canadian border in Minnesota: "Reports today give 1,000 burned and missing. The area burned is estimated to be 2,500 square miles. Fires are still burning. Situation on this forest well in hand."

Winnipeg, Oct. 12.—Scores of homeless men, women and children are huddled in the open at Rainy River. That town is now so full of refugees from the fires there is no room to give them cover. The danger of famine has passed. Relief trains have arrived with provisions sufficient for several days. Aid is being urgently called for. What is wanted is food and clothing; there is no use for money.

Two of the carloads of provisions received at Rainy River came from Virginia, Minn. Two others came from Duluth. Fort Frances, Ont., sent $300.

J. A. Matieu, manager of the Rainy River Lumber company, estimated that 100 lives have been lost in that district alone, and he put the money loss at $5,000,000. There are thirty dead in an extemporized morgue, and many more have been sent to Duluth.

The fires have been brought well under control. The work of feeding and housing the thousands of refugees and gathering the dead is now engaging the attention of the authorities, although men are kept on duty to report any renewed activity of the fires. The wind has dropped to a calm and the fires are no longer dangerous, under the conditions, but another high wind would again start it spreading.

STREET TRAGEDY

To Save Himself Man Used Schoolboy as a Human Shield.

New York, Oct. 12.—A school boy named Charley Fisher was playing ball with some other boys in Madison avenue at East 103d street last evening when two men stopped at the corner and began to fight. When one of the men pulled a revolver from his pocket the other yelled with fright and ran toward Charley Fisher. The frightened man picked up Charley bodily and held the boy in front of him as a shield from the expected bullets.

"Don't be a fool," the frightened man cried as he tried completely to hide himself behind Charley's slight form. "Look out, Biff, don't shoot the kid!"

As the boy tried to struggle away the man with the revolver fired. The bullet entered Charley's head. In a few moments he was dead. The man for whom the bullet was meant let loose of Charley and ran. Biff Clark, a former prize fighter, is the man who did the shooting. A crowd which collected at the sound of the pistol shot chased him into the hallway of a

Some of the Democratic speakers who have been grieving for fear the Republicans had not properly fulfilled all platform pledges, would do well to think of their party's platform pledges. As an instance of this it is recalled that only seven of the thirty-two Democratic senators stood by the bill introduced by a Democrat to repeal the tariff on wood pulp and lumber. Time after time the majority of

Annual Showing of Fall Styles

Every section of this store is now showing complete lines of Fall merchandise.

The correct things for Fall and Winter can now be decided upon definitely.

All stocks are now at their best. There is economy in buying at this store that in conjunction, operates five large stores, that knows the value of merchandise, that has stood the test for twenty-five years, without giving away chances on premiums to entice the purchaser in gambling.

This is no "Flight in the middle of night." Store, that is here today and some where else tomorrow, but expects to meet you for years to come.

Promises can easily be made and when you are gone no one to right them.

Premiums to sell merchandise with but one to win and hundreds to lose, only creates heartaches and headaches for the loser and gains very little for the winner.

At the age of modern merchandizing, when the public is able to conspire and combine their efforts, what chance has the ordinary innocent purchaser.

Our stock of Domestic, Woolens, Comforts and Blankets, Dress Goods and Silks, Carpets, Lace Curtains, Rugs, Linoleums, and Oilcloth, Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves, Ready-to-wear Garments, Coats, Skirts, and Waists, Tailored Suits and Sweater Coats, Ladies', Misses' and Children's Hats are all of The Gold Mine type, new and up-to-date and require no premium to the purchaser.

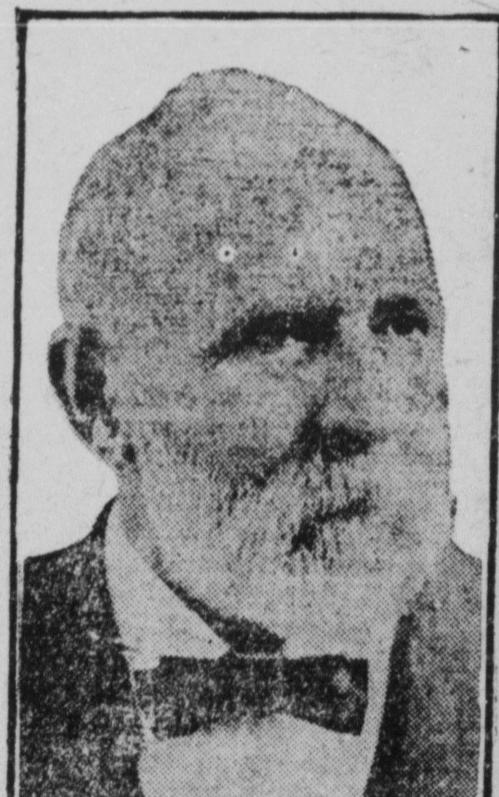

A visit in our store will convince you that our stock is modern in every respect and our merchandise is reliable.

Our store will be closed Wednesday evening at 6 p. m. and until Thursday evening 6 p. m. on account of holiday.

THE BURGLARS' CLUB

By Henry A. Hering

"The burglar explained, 'Tis so, we are men who have pretty well exhausted the pleasures of life. If we all live to the Army or the Navy, all of us are heroes, and we are heroes to ourselves; there's much sentiment left for us. We've started a Burglar's Club to help things on a bit. The entrance fee is a dozen burglars, the subject to be set by our president, and every other year each member has to keep up his subscription by a similar caprice.'"

The Luck of the Illingworths

(Copyright 1899 by W. G. Chapman.)

(Copyright by the Author.)

Danby Travers was annoyed. He was one of the founders of the Burglars' club. His entrance fee had been the temporary abstraction from the crown jewels of the Koh-i-noor itself. Two years ago he had kept up his membership by the burglary of the duchess of Guiseley's emeralds; and now, by the unkindness of fate or the simple cussedness of his committee, he could only renew his subscription by purloining the Black Pearl of Agni. It showed the folly of becoming the champion jewel burglar of the club.

Of course it was pure coincidence, for only four people knew that he was in love with Mary Illingworth. Mary knew it, because he had told her; Lord and Lady Illingworth, because they had been fatuously consulted in the matter; and he, Danby Travers, because of a stuffy, despairing feeling somewhere in his chest from the moment of awakening in the morning down to the last gleam of consciousness at night. But the Burglars' club did not know it, nor did they know that Lord Illingworth had told him that in future he was not to cross the baronial threshold; and all because, despite his brilliant record in India and at Hurlingham, he, Danby Travers, was as poor as a chapel mouse.

Therefore he received the mandate of the club with something less than his usual urbanity. But reflection brought a Mephistophelean suggestion of comfort. He had been unable to rob Lord Illingworth of his fairest daughter. He would at any rate purloin his most valued jewel.

The Black Pearl of Agni was world-renowned. During the military operations in the Western Deccan in 1803 it had been looted by a certain Maj. Illingworth of the Bengal Native infantry, from a rich temple dedicated to the Hindoo God of Fire. From that day his fortunes had prospered amazingly.

The jewel was kept at Knowlesworth. Travers knew the place well. He had spent a fortnight there, and there he had made love to Mary Illingworth. She had shown him the pearl; and, because he was to be her husband, had shown him the secret of its hiding-place. Little did he think at the time that the next occasion on which he entered that room would be as a burglar—an amateur one, it is true, but still a burglar.

No wonder that Danby Travers was annoyed. The only justification for his conduct that he could think of was that the temporary loss of the pearl would probably have a beneficial effect on Lord Illingworth's character.

He had received the secretary's intimation on the Friday morning. He had to show the pearl at the next meeting of the club—on the following

Here, with 5,000 miles of space between us, I declare to you, Ramma Lal, I do not fear the wrath of Agni. I call him humbug. I read Shakespeare. I write him an ass. I am doubtful even of Vishnu and Siva."

Travers paid no attention to Ramma Lal's reproachful reply. He was lost in amazement. Here, on the very night he had chosen for purloining the jewel, two other men were on the same errand. Stop. There was a reason for their date. They had mentioned 25, 50 and 75 years. It was evidently an anniversary. Every 25 years an attempt had to be made to restore the jewel to the Temple of Agni. Three attempts had already been made in vain, and now, on the hundredth anniversary of the theft by Maj. Illingworth, another attempt was in progress.

At any rate, he was forewarned. The house was a mile and a half away from the station by the main road on which the Hindoos were going. He knew a cut across the fields which shortened the distance by half a mile. He would gain ten minutes. In that ten minutes he had to obtain the pearl.

The train pulled up at Knowlesworth station. The two Hindoos stepped out. Travers followed. He watched them start along the road; then he briskly cut across country.

The church clock struck eight as he reached the terrace in front of the hall. From the beginning he had matured only one plan of campaign. He knew the rules of the house, and he would take advantage of them. From eight to nine the men-servants were busy in the dining-room. Anyone could open the main outer door and enter. He might, of course, be seen, and in this eventuality Travers relied maid. She certainly took him for a guest.

He went straight down the great corridor, and then branched to the left. It was the third door ahead. He pulled back the panel as Mary had shown him, undid the bolt from within, and entered. The room was in darkness. He struck a light, half expecting to find the Hindoo disclosed. No, he was alone, and the pearl still there.

It was a room without furniture. In the center was a replica of the great idol of Agni at the temple from which the pearl had been looted. The god sat there, smug, cross-legged, and hideous. The eyes fascinated the beholder. The left one was of marble; the right made of a stone worth a prince's ransom—the one known throughout the world as the Black Pearl of Agni. At the god's knees, their holders resting on the floor, were two gigantic candles. Travers lit them.

Then he stepped quickly to the idol, and sought the left hand of the god. He pressed the nail of the fourth finger. The god's right eyelid lifted, and the complete stone was disclosed. Travers quickly abstracted it, released the lid, and put the pearl in his pocket.

His object was accomplished. But what was that? Listen.

There was a sound at the window. The Hindoo was there—beaten by half a minute.

Travers turned to the door. Then, impelled by an overpowering curiosity to see the end of the drama, he slipped to another window, and got behind the curtain.

There was a faint whistle from below. Hang it, what a fool he'd been! The Baboo had seen the momentary

"What does he say?" demanded Lord Illingworth.

"He says, 'replied the facile Baboo, 'that no sooner had he taken the pearl than there was the flash of fire and much smoke. When it cleared away the stone had vanished. Doubtless Agni the god had come for his own."

Lord Illingworth blazed with fury.

"He has swallowed it," he said. "We shall have to cut him open."

Ramma Lal translated this terrific threat. The Hindoo gave a yell. Despair lent him strength. With a serpentine twist he slid from the grasp of one of his captors and knocked up the arm of the other. The window was still open. He sprang through it into the darkness of the night.

Lord Illingworth ran to the window, fired blindly, and then rushed from the room. The others followed. Only the Baboo, his two captors, and the boy with the clothes remained.

"Come along," said one of the grooms.

"Stay for one moment, I beseech you," said Ramma Lal, "and let me worship Agni the god."

"None of yer blarney," returned the man. But the other, who was of a romantic temperament, said: "Wot's the odds? Let the heathen do it if he wants."

"You see, gentlemen," said the Baboo, eagerly, "it is my very last opportunity. I shall be lifelong imprisoned for the inauspicious event of this evening. It is positively my last appearance in the open. Let me worship Agni as I do in my own land. No Englishman has yet witnessed the entire ceremony. It shall not take long. I will compress my supplications. Five minutes will be ample dispensation."

The grooms looked at each other. Their curiosity settled the matter.

"We'll give you four minutes, so look sharp," said one.

"Thank you," replied Ramma Lal, gratefully. "Agni will bless you for your beneficence."

The men released their hold. One closed the window, the other shut the door, and placed himself before it.

Ramma Lal took off his silk hat, muffler and coat. He advanced to the idol and salaamed low three times. Then he raised his eyes and sang.

Travers knew the song. It was a ribald ditty of the bazaars, and it had as much to do with the worship of Agni as with the laws of gravitation.

He watched the Baboo with increasing interest. He had evidently some ulterior object in view, but what was it? Ah!

Ramma Lal had gradually approached the idol. Still singing, he had bowed his head till it had almost touched Agni's knees. Travers hardly saw the movement of the hands. Only an Oriental could have done it so swiftly. The two candles were suddenly extinguished, and the room was in absolute darkness.

With loud imprecations the two grooms rushed to where the Baboo had been—to collide with each other, and incidentally bring down the huge candlesticks. Then recovering, they dashed about the room in search of their prisoner, only to seize the boy who had the clothes. Finally one of them struck a light.

They were alone with the boy. The window was again wide open.

Then men leaned out. There was no moon. The lights of the searchers flashed in the distance. They turned blankly to each other.

"There'll be pop to pay for this," said the boy, who was still suffering from rough usage in the dark. "You'll both jolly well get stuck."

"All your blamed fault for lis'nin' to his tommy rot," said the one man savage to his companion.

Again the lights flashed in the garden, and then gradually extended beyond. Travers waited until he was sure there was no one below. Then he emerged from his recess, and followed the Indians through the window. Leaving the park to the searchers, he kept to the main avenue, and soon gained the high road. A ten-mile walk brought him to Dorton junction, where he just missed the last train to town.

The sun was high when Danby Travers reached his rooms, and it was late in the afternoon when he awoke. The morning papers and his letters were at his bedside. He at once opened one of the former, curiously to see if there was any reference to the events of the previous night.

Good heavens! What was this?

"BURGLARY AND FIRE AT KNOWLESWORTH."

The Illingworth Pearl Stolen.

The Hall Gutted.

Knowlesworth hall, the historic seat of the Illingworths, was last night the scene of two extraordinary events.

"Lord and Lady Illingworth were entertaining one of their famous week-end parties at dinner when a daring and successful attempt was made to steal the celebrated pearl of Agni, the largest known black pearl in the world."

"A native Indian was found in a summer house in the Italian garden by a servant. As several determined attempts to steal the pearl had already been made, the safety of this remarkable jewel was at once called into question. Lord Illingworth and his guests hurried to the temple room, where the great pearl was kept, and there found another native, who was promptly secured. The pearl was missing, and the strictest search failed to bring it to light. It is believed that the thief has swallowed it, a fact which it is to be hoped that the X-rays will be able to demonstrate."

"Owing to gross mismanagement somewhere, the two natives escaped from custody, and it was midnight before they were again apprehended—one of them at Dorton, in a state of collapse from fear and cold; the other at Lingfield, defiant, but suffering from a sprained ankle. They will be brought up to-morrow at the Dorton petty sessions."

"Scarcely had Lord Illingworth and his guests retired to rest after an exciting evening than they were again alarmed, this time by an outbreak of fire in the temple room. Its cause is unknown, but the flames, assisted by a high wind, spread with extraordinary rapidity, in spite of the prompt measures taken by the Hall fire brigade. Engines quickly arrived from Lingfield and Dorton, but the supply of water was totally inadequate, and it soon became evident that the whole structure was doomed. At the moment of telegraphing, the fire was raging furiously, but all sleeping in the house had been rescued without injury."

"In one night Lord Illingworth has lost his great family jewel and his ancestral seat. The 'Luck of the Illingworths' seems to have deserted him."

"It is a remarkable coincidence that a fire consumed the Hindu Temple of Agni the night that the pearl was taken from it by Maj. Illingworth in 1803."

"Agni is the Hindu God of Fire."

"Thank heaven, Mary's safe!" ejaculated Travers. "I hope she hasn't had a great fright." Then, after a pause, "And Ramma Lal caught, after all! He deserved a better fate. What an uncommon good thing I got the pearl! If I hadn't taken it, the Indians would have been well on the way to Bombay with it by now, and if neither of us had taken it, the stone might have been burnt up. Would it, though? There mightn't have been a fire at all. Rummy notion that Agni should blaze the whole show in revenge for my desecration! It shan't interfere with my feelings of satisfaction. I'm a public benefactor—an Illingworth benefactor, anyway. I shall explain this to my lord at an early date. Hullo, what's this? A lawyer's letter. I can tell 'em by the smell. What's he threatening?"

But it wasn't a threat. It was simply an intimation that under the will of Col. Thomas Archer, a distant relative lately deceased, he, Danby Travers, succeeded to the whole estate, a bequest made "on account of intrepidity shown in the recent Irawadi campaign." The income therefrom, the lawyer added, was estimated at about £3,000 per annum, and he would be pleased to have an expression of Mr. Danby Travers' wishes with respect to the same.

Three thousand pounds a year! Travers jumped out of bed and executed a series of gyrations. Three thousand pounds a year! That meant Mary. But did it? It was a fortune to him, but how would Lord Illingworth view it? Well, if he didn't like it he needn't. Mary and he were now independent of everybody.

He made his way to the Burglars' meeting in a blur of happiness. He was rather late. Other men were there already, and they one and all congratulated him.

"Aren't you rather premature?" he asked. "You haven't seen the pearl yet."

"Bother the pearl," said Altamont. "We mean the title."

"What the deuce are you drivin' at?"

"Haven't you seen the papers?"

"Crowds of 'em, and lawyers' letters too. My head's buzzin' with 'em. What is it this time?"

"Your cousin tumbled down some stone steps in Vienna last night, and you are Lord Travers now—that's all!"

Danby sat down. This final stroke of fortune was too much for him.

"I can't say I'm sorry," he blurted at length. "Bertram wouldn't have been sorry if it had been me. And I'm glad about the title because of—. Here, I say, you fellows, what's come over the world since last night?"

"The black pearl of the Illingworths has changed hands, we hope," said the secretary, who wanted to start the business of the evening.

"The black pearl has, and the luck of the Illingworths went with it. They've had a fire, and I've got a bequest and a title. Perhaps you fellows'll be more superstitious in future. That's what brought my luck, anyway." Saying which, he produced the Black Pearl of Agni.

To his unbounded joy and immense surprise Lord Illingworth received the missing stone from London during the course of the next day.

The Indians had been remanded for a week, pending further inquiries, and as they had obviously not stolen the jewel after all, Lord Illingworth declined to prosecute, and they were released from custody. An unknown friend interested himself in the natives. One of them, a Baboo, was sent back to Bombay by an early steamer. The other, who refused to return to India, thanks to the same unknown benefactor, was put in the way of earning his living by teaching Hindustani. He has since gone over to the Mohammedan faith.

With repossession of the pearl, good fortune came once more to the Illingworths. In making excavations consequent on rebuilding the hall, a coal seam was discovered, which eventually doubled the family wealth.

The Black Pearl of Agni is now protected from burglars by many quaint electrical conceits. When the next anniversary comes round any Indian visitors will have a lively time of it.

Later on in the year a marriage took place between Mary, younger daughter of Lord and Lady Illingworth, and Danby, ninth Baron Travers, a nobleman who had been mentioned in dispatches in the Irawadi campaign, and who was not unknown at Hurlingham. His clubs were the Marlborough, Brooks' and the Burglars'.

Danby Travers Was Annoyed.

Tuesday night. That gave him four days for the business.

Knowlesworth was sure to be full of visitors, for Lord Illingworth had succeeded a late master of Balliol in entertaining the most distinguished weekend parties in the country.

Travers turned to the Post, certain to find the list. Ah! here it was:

"Lord and Lady Illingworth are having a large party at Knowlesworth, entertaining the Bohemian ambassador and Countess Polksky, the duke of Strathpeffer, the marquess and marchioness of Bridlington, the dean of Penzance, Prof. Rawson, and others."

"What a crew!" thought Travers. "Wouldn't Strathpeffer be pleased if I came a cropper! I wonder he can go there after Mary's last refusal. I'll wait till they thin a bit. Some are sure to go on Monday, so Monday was.

allow me to have the felicity of indicating at least one point of difference between your honor and gentlemen mentioned," replied the Baboo.

"Your honor has intelligent assistant, while enumerated catalogues had not.

Have the kindness to point out fly in our ointment. It is distinguished by its absence. The jewel is yours."

"Perish the jewel!" cried the other Hindoo in a sudden outburst of fury.

"Why couldn't the Huzoor have left it alone, or have taken another jewel?

Why should he have singled out the one above all others necessary to the happiness of Agni? And why should I, of all the priests of the temple, be chosen to restore the sacred stone?"

It was 19 minutes past eight. Travers hesitated no longer. He unbuckled his topcoat, and, with cap in hand as though he were a guest just come in from a stroll before dinner, he opened the hall door.

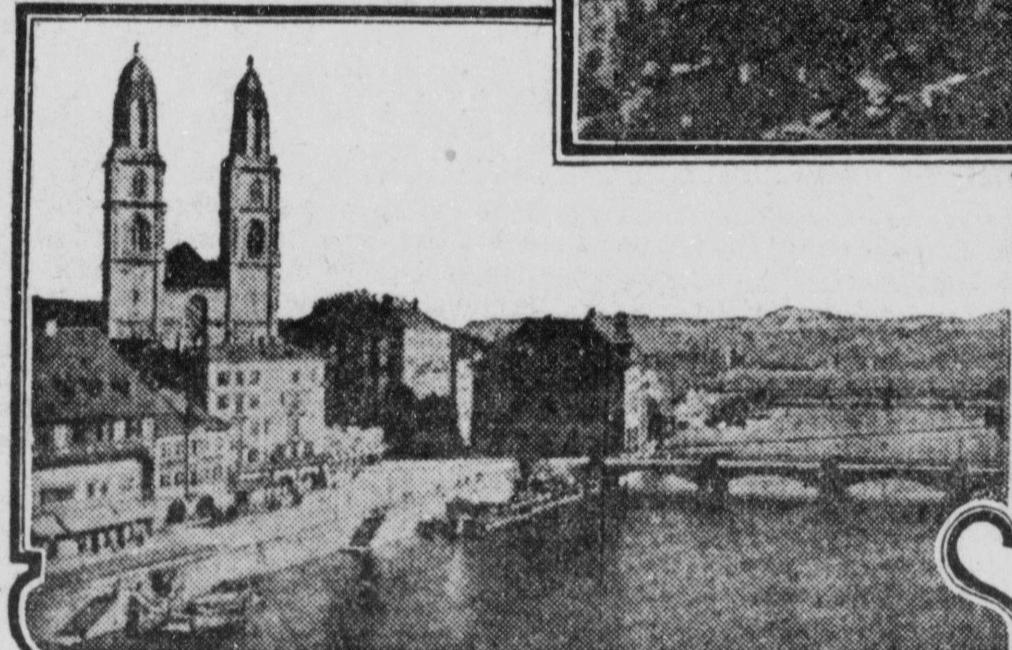

No one was in sight. He crossed the hall, and stepped lightly up the stairs. At their head he passed a Storm-Center of Swiss Reformation

ONE thousand Zurich women have declared for universal suffrage. It is a recent movement there, though other Swiss cities have been interested for some time in the much mooted question. Altogether the little country has 17,000 advocates for giving women the ballot. Recently the women of Zurich canton petitioned the state for the right to act as jurors on a case in which a woman was the defendant. Their request was refused. Later, with characteristic Swiss bravery, they sent in another petition to the legislature asking the right to sit in judgment on special courts, such as are held in France for adjusting differences between mistress and maid, and other cases where differences arise between a woman employer and a woman employee. While this, too, was denied, Parliament admitted the sex's eligibility to such an office.

"We are not talking much about it," said the vice president of the Zurich Woman's Suffrage society, Fraulein Honneger, "lest publicity frighten the state into retarding the concession. It is not much of a gain, but," she added with true suffrage optimism, "it is a step forward. If we had made that demand ten years ago, when to speak of our having the ballot was to be laughed at as a dreamer, our petition would not have got past the porter's desk. But a city that was the first in Europe to open its university to women will not finally deny us our citizens' rights."

Switzerland has no women's clubs. But while the suffragists are engaged along one line, another body of women is working for philanthropy. A group of young women representing the foremost Zurich families has organized this year a practical training school where members study the needs of poor children and thereby help to better their unfortunate lot.

"We are endeavoring to interest our young girls of leisure and education in this work," said one of the promoters, Fraulein Fertz, herself a beautiful, earnest, and cultured young woman. The medical inspector of schools is assisted by this guild. Children of the poor receive two full meals gratis in Swiss schools, and if the mothers of these children be employed at outside work until a late hour the guild takes charge of the little ones.

Through the influence of this guild a law was passed last year by which a guardian is appointed for illegitimate children and this guardian can compel the father of a deserted child to contribute to its support. If the mother be under age also she, too, becomes a ward of this guardian. A similar organization to the Zurich guild exists in German cities, and, by a similar state law, the absconder of moral obligations is traced easily and extradited. To women is due the large number of temperance restaurants existing in Switzerland. Frau Professor Orellie of Zurich is the originator of this movement.

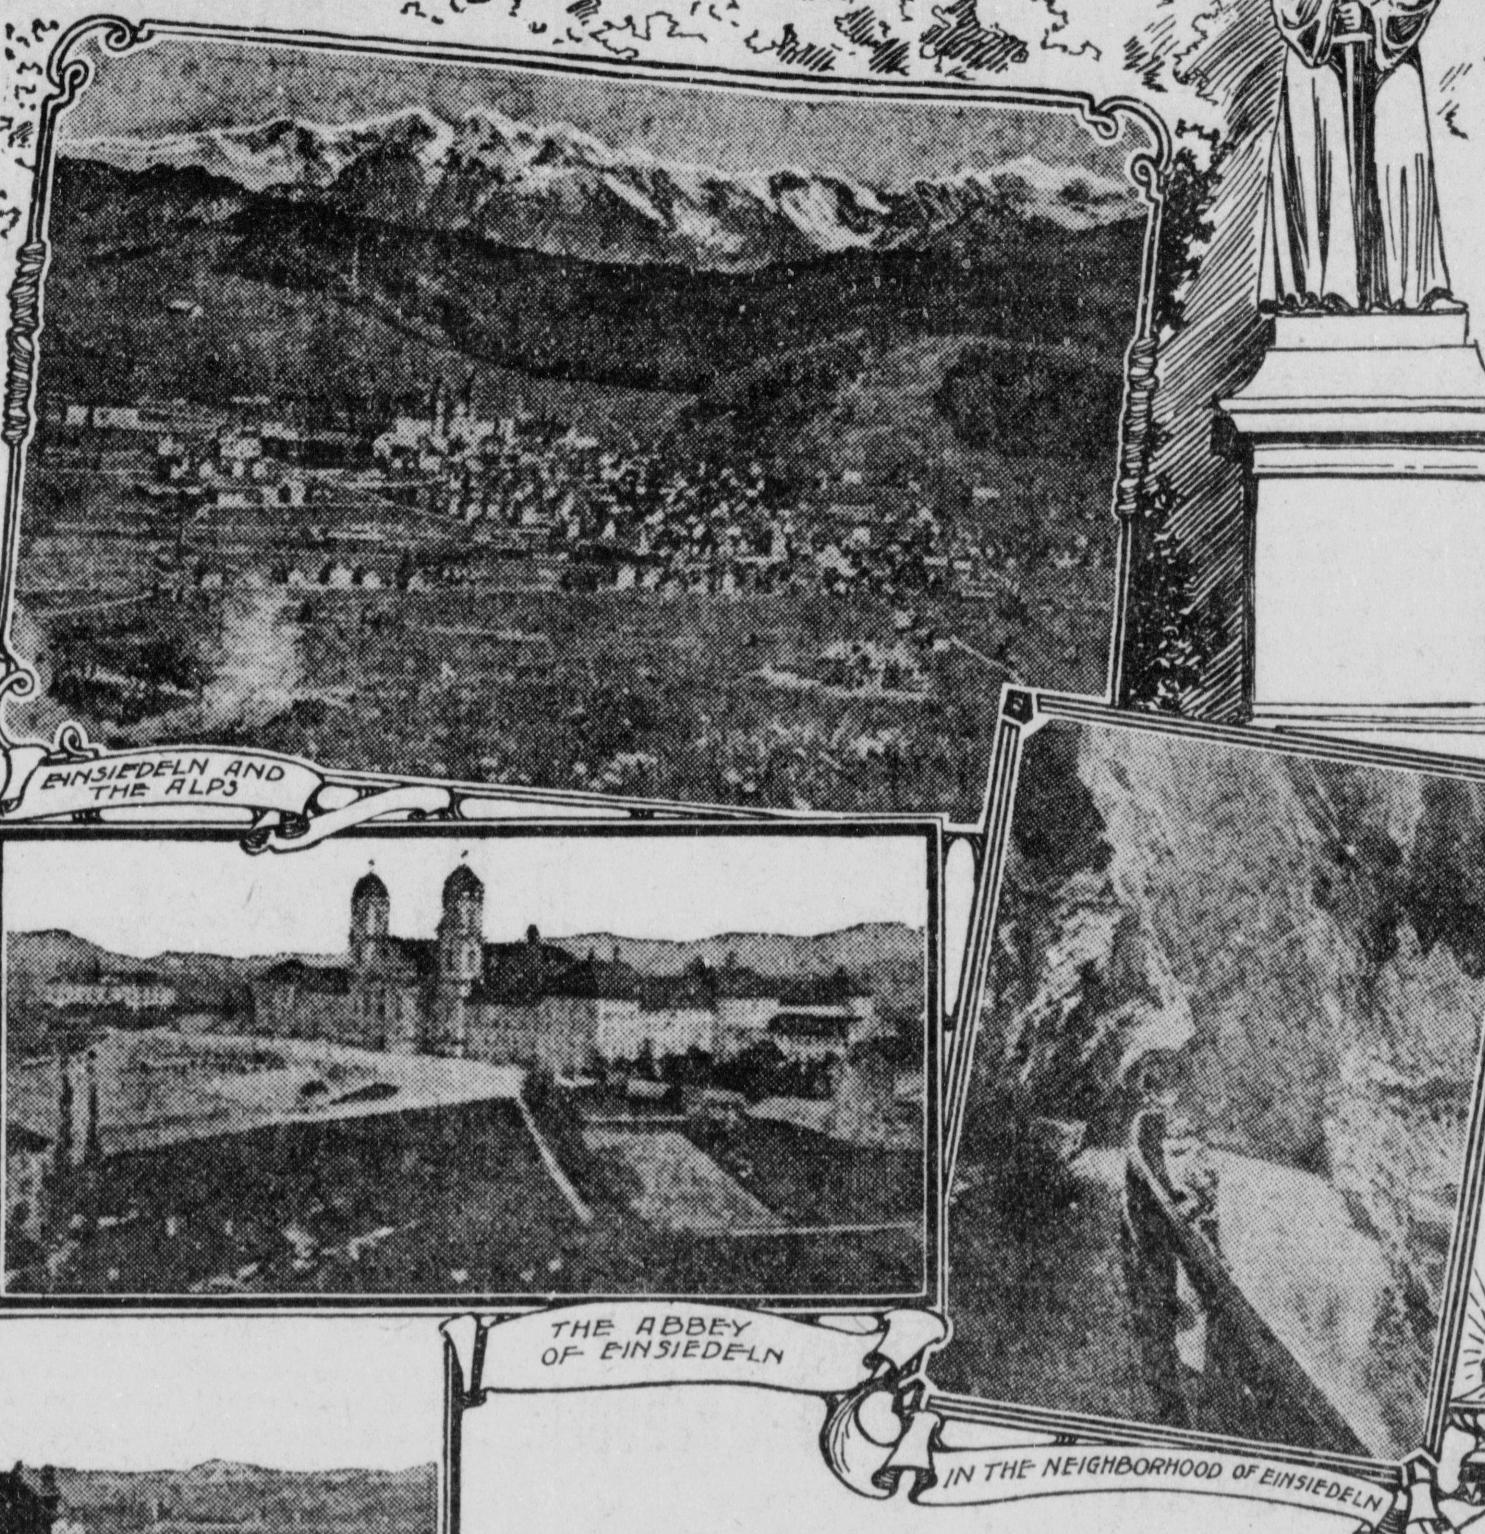

Socialism is spreading in Switzerland; though how a country governed by the referendum system can be possibly more democratic passes understanding. Made up of three races, German, French and Italian, socialists of these kindred nations have entered Switzerland and scattered broadcast seeds of discontent in the brave, beautiful little republic.

Zurich has led in every movement of its history. It was the storm center of the Protestant Reformation period in Switzerland. Zwingli's home is here. In the Grossmünster, whose tall towers have dominated the town for eight centuries, he reached the Protestant crusade and was the church's last Catholic pastor and its first Protestant one. High up in one of the towers is a quaint seated figure of Charlemagne, the legendary founder of Grossmünster chapter. Back of the cathedral are the cloisters which now form part of a girls' seminary.

In an old chapel across the road is an interesting collection of articles relating to the Reformation, including letters written by Calvin, Luther and Zwingli, each remarkably distinct. There is also one by Lady Jane Grey; her penmanship is legible as print and she wrote the letter in Latin. Back of this little chapel, called the Water church, is a splendid bronze statue of Zwingli.

Zurich is the capital of the canton of Zurich and is situated at the north end of Lake Zurich. It is the largest city in Switzerland. The old, traditional town, with its narrow, steep streets and its high, dark houses, lies on both banks of the Limmat. The rest of the city has spacious thoroughfares and splendid buildings. The lake quays in the Klinene Stadt are very attractive. Near their northern end is the fine Tonhalle, a popular modern concert building and pleasure palace. In the vicinity of their southern end is the beautiful Belvoir park. Near the Tonhalle, the stately main street of the city—the Bahnhofstrasse—leads from the lake north to the railway station. The bridges are striking. Adjacent to the fine Munster bridge is the Wasserkirche, on the right bank, containing the city library with 130,000 volumes and over 5,000 manuscripts. It preserves more valuable objects, including the Codex Vaticanus. The Grossmünster is Romanesque with Grecian features. Further north is the Ruden, with the national educational exhibit and the Pestalozzi cabinet. The modern Catholic Church of Our Lady is a magnificent basilica. The Church of St. Peter holds the tomb of Lavator, who was its pastor. The town hall, dates from 1694. The university and the famous federal polytechnic with their numerous institutions, laboratories and clinics are in the northern part of Grosse Stadt.

Switzerland is the most mountainous country of Europe, three-fourths of its area being covered with mountains. The grandeur of the scenery has been pictured and described innumerable times. With the exception of certain portions of America, there is nothing in the world to equal it in beauty. The central and southern parts are occupied by the Swiss Alps, which spread over nearly three-fifths of the entire area. The Jura Mountains cover the northwestern portions of the country.

Far up in the mountains is the beautiful little town of Einsiedeln. I was fortunate enough to be present during a week-end musical fete, in which singing societies from the country and from neighboring Bavarian towns were present in numbers exceeding 2,000. Switzerland, having only the summer time for holidaying, has organized a movable saengerfest by which each town and city gets its share of gay song and jolly visitors. All the cantons were represented at Einsiedeln and every house was decorated with Swiss colors, scarlet and white.

Early in the afternoon the open air concert began. It was held in the vast, sloping square in front of the Benedictine abbey. The assembling of the singers was picturesque. Each canton carried a banner, individual societies carried great horns filled with flowers and the women singers wore white gowns and crimson sashes. As the quiet, well-behaved little place has but one policeman, the fire brigade turned out to give a semblance of civic authority, also to serve as a guard of honor. And while the marchers were massing around the conductor's box a cannon was kept firing a vigorous welcome. The bright Swiss decorations on the quaint, gabled houses, the gay Sunday dress of the women, the encircling mountains—the nearby ones dark green, the distant peaks snow-tipped, edelweiss-decked—made a splendid, old world pictures.

And the definite note was the ancient abbey of Einsiedeln, which called the town into being, and which is one of the celebrated shrines of Europe. The abbey church, known as Notre Dame des Ermites, is a grand basilica, the edifice flanked on either side with monastery buildings. Since the year 934 the abbey of Einsiedeln has

Housekeeping in Hankow

Among our many wanderings our housekeeping in Hankow was an experience I never had before—nor after, writes Florence Gilbert in the New Idea Woman's Magazine. We have five or six servants. That sounds fine, but before passing judgment you should have experience with them! The peace of mind of the mistress depends largely on her "number one boy," the head servant, who, if efficient, is likely to have come from Ningpo. He is a tall, impressive personage who wears a blue cotton coat fastening on the side and reaching to his ankles, without which he must never appear in his employer's presence. To do this is only second as a mark of disrespect to having the cue in any other position than hanging decorously down the back.

The house coolie at work may sometimes twist his cue around his head, but the boy never. Through the boy the orders are usually issued to the rest of the household staff, translated from the pidgin English of the mistress. There are the "No. 2 boy," the house coolie, who is the only one with enough work to do to keep him moderately busy; the cook and the second cook, who is learning his trade at the expense of his employer's digestion. The cook's chief business is going to market and presenting his account for his purchases.

It is a strange collection often in that market basket, which a wise housekeeper always sees. Goat flesh, perhaps, politely called mutton; or beef that has been exposed in a fly-filled shop; a live chicken or two, game of various sorts—pheasant, teal, snipe and perhaps a fish, more appetizing than one would expect who has seen and smelled the Yang-tse water.

The vegetables are all of the sort that need cooking, for no intelligent person will run the risks involved in eating raw Chinese vegetables and fruits.

In addition to the supplies which can be purchased in the Chinese market every day one's diet may include fresh butter from Australia and all sorts of canned goods shipped from the United States, Great Britain, France and Germany. These are sold in shops in the concessions kept by Europeans, Japanese, Parsees—those keen merchants from India—or even Chinese. While expensive, they are not quite such prohibitive luxuries as to inspire the remark of the English missionary's little girl in central India, who said: "Mother, I suppose the king has ruined things to eat every day."

INSECTS DETRIMENT TO NATURAL FOREST GROWTH

Damage Done by Causing Failure of Many Nuts to Germinate Makes the Group an Important One From Economic Standpoint.

(By FRED S. BROOKS, Associate Entomologist, West Virginia University Agricultural Experiment Station.)

The forests of West Virginia are rich in native nut-bearing trees and shrubs. At least twenty-seven species are found that bear nuts which are used as food by man or by the animals that are of value to man. The nut-bearing trees furnish also the bulk of hardwood timber that is produced in the state.

With the probable exception of the beechnut, all the more common varieties of nuts, and, presumably, those that are less common as well, are attacked by the larvae, or grubs, of over a dozen different species of snout beetles. Some of these larvae feed on the husks and inner tissues of immature nuts and others on the kernels of nuts that are more nearly ripe. Young walnuts and hickorynuts are frequently attacked soon after the blossoms fall from the trees and the infested nuts drop to the ground before they are half grown. Chestnuts, acorns and some other varieties sustain the greatest injury as they approach maturity. It is not unusual for chestnuts that are kept a week or two after gathering to become from 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. "wormy" and acorns often suffer to even a greater extent. The infested nuts are rendered unfit for food and in many cases are so badly eaten that they will not germinate when planted.

The injury which these insects do to a valuable article of food and their direct detriment to natural forest development, in causing the failure of the head, the front part of which is prolonged into a snout or proboscis. In some species this snout is short and stout and in others it is long, slender and wire-like. In the females of some of the nut weevils it is longer than the rest of the body. The mouth, which is armed with a minute but strong pair of jaws, is situated on the apex of the snout and the appendage is used for piercing or puncturing various kinds of plant tissue to obtain food and to provide an opening in which to deposit eggs.

Chestnuts are frequently gathered that appear sound at first, but within ten days or two weeks thereafter become excessively "wormy." Where these "worms" come from has often been a matter of conjecture on the part of those who handle nuts. It is a common belief that they originate from the "sting" of some insect administered at the time the trees are in bloom. As a matter of fact, they hatch from eggs that are in the nuts at the time the nuts are gathered. Most of these eggs are deposited by this chestnut weevil a short time previous to the dropping of the nuts from the trees.

The common acorn weevil is the largest of the weevils attacking acorns. In size it is similar to the hickorynut weevil but in color it more nearly resembles the larger chestnut weevil. The spots on the back are smaller than in the latter species, however, and are not so bright and conspicuous. The snout is very slender and is curved at the point. In many nuts to germinate, make the group an important one from an economic standpoint.

Nuts are attacked by a great variety of insects, but the most serious injuries are done by moths and snout beetles. The larvae of several species of moths may be found in chestnuts, beechnuts and acorns, particularly in nuts that have their shells broken so as to permit easy entrance to the kernel by the insects. The damage wrought by the class of insects known as snout beetles, however, is greatly in excess of that done by all other kinds combined.

This species seems to attack only the acorns of the biennial oaks and in my collecting has always been found more abundant on red oak than on any other tree. The acorns which it attacks are late in maturing and the beetles are correspondingly late in appearing.

REGULATE SEX OF CHICKEN

Scientists Have Been Studying for Years to Discover Law and Undoubtedly It Would Be Boon to Poultrymen.

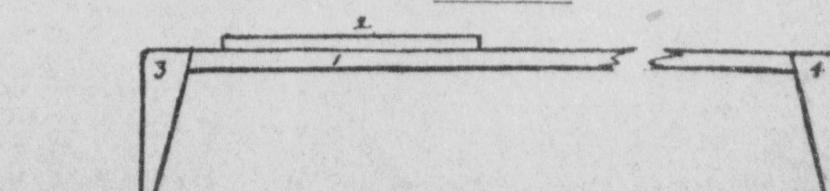

For years the scientists have been trying to discover the law that regulates sex. Undoubtedly the discovery would be a great boon to poultry keepers. To have the farm over-run with cockerels when early pullets are wanted is annoying, and it is not surprising that any system purporting to regulate the sex is eagerly tried by breeders. We have heard it claimed that the pointed eggs hatched pullets and the round ones cockerels, and then again the opposite is claimed. Others claim that the location of the air cell is the determining factor, and again that it is merely a question of nourishment, the stronger nourished eggs producing males. Some breeders depend upon their matings, believing that cockerels mated with hens will produce a preponderance of females, and that a cock mated with pullets will produce a preponderance of males. In spite of all the theories that have been advanced, the law that controls sex has yet to be discovered.

The First Calf.

With the first calf the heifer should be stimulated to regularity in feeding and milking, to keep up a good flow of milk and to maintain this flow pretty close up to the next calving. The object is to fix in her continuity for milk. Never let her get fat, though. They keynote to success is the cow, and the foundation of the cow is feed and breed.

Women May Vote in Portugal.
Lisbon, Oct. 12.—President Braga favors the establishment of woman suffrage in Portugal. He has reiterated the provisional government's intention to administer affairs only until it is able to hand over control to a properly elected assembly. He added that the assembly would be elected by universal suffrage, and he saw no reason why women should not vote as well as men, they being equally interested in the nation's well being.

Italy Bars Banished Monks.
Rome, Oct. 12.—The government has determined to prevent the expelled Portuguese Jesuits from joining Italian communities. A strict surveillance will be maintained on the frontiers to prevent any of the monks from getting into Italy.

Facing Second Flood.
Bedford, Ind., Oct. 12.—The second rise of White river, the one most dreaded by the farmers, is sweeping over the bottom lands and will cause a heavy loss of corn. The waters are full of heavy drift, which tears out corn stalks by the roots. The Monon railroad is covered with several feet of water from Salt creek.

ENFORCING THE PURE FOOD LAW

Indiana Pushed 230 Prosecutions During Year.

CONVICTION IN MOST CASES

Out of the Whole Number Prosecuted 207 Were Either Convicted or Pleaded Guilty and Were Fined, Average Fine Being $10, to Which Was Added Costs—Benzene of Soda Cases Held in Abeyance.

Indianapolis, Oct. 12.—Complete reports prepared in the food and drug laboratory of the state board of health of prosecutions for food and drug law violations during the fiscal year which closed Sept. 30 show a total of 230 prosecutions brought during the year. In this number 207 were either convicted or pleaded guilty and were fined, the average fine being $10, with added costs, aggregating approximately $25. Of the prosecutions twenty-one were for violations of the drug laws, chiefly concerning improper labeling.

In September ten prosecutions were brought and the defendants all found guilty. No prosecutions were had for violating the state board rule concerning benzene of soda. The total fines and costs for the month amounted to $214.10.

IMMIGRANTS STRANDED

Their Car Attached to Wrong Train at Indianapolis.

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 12.—Thirty immigrants, unable to speak English and suffering with hunger, were stranded in an old passenger coach in this city as a result of a mistake made by railroad men. The foreigners were en route from Cleveland to St. Louis, having been placed in a coach at Cleveland by an employment agency and started for St. Louis, their coach being attached to the rear of a passenger train on the Big Four railroad. When the train reached Indianapolis the coach should have been attached to a train on the St. Louis division, but through a mistake it was coupled to a train on the Chicago division.

The mistake was not discovered until the train arrived at Lafayette. Then the coach was switched to the Big Four yards. The immigrants became excited when they learned of their plight, could not be quieted, and the police were called. They had not been fed for a day. The coach was later attached to an Indianapolis train.

Further Suspicion Created.

Martinsville, Ind., Oct. 12.—Constable J. W. Miller and others feel certain that Charles Biddle, accused of murdering his wife in Franklin county, is the junk dealer suspected of the murder of the stranger whose body was found in a well near Plano some weeks ago. The picture of Biddle, the constable says, resembles the junk dealer who disappeared after the crime. Besides it is stated that the junk dealer on his first visit here gave his name as Charles Biddle.

SPANIARDS SEEKING WAY TO A REPUBLIC

Situation Causing Government No End of Uneasiness.

Madrid, Oct. 12.—Notwithstanding the government's profession of disbelief in the reflex influence of the Portuguese revolution in Spain, it is unquestionable that the situation is causing much uneasiness. Several isolated demonstrations of sympathy with the Portuguese Republicans have been suppressed by the police, but a movement has now been started by Republican and Socialist members of the cortes for a gathering on a large scale to celebrate the establishment of the republic of Portugal, and this is causing the government much concern. The date at present favored by the organizers of the proposed gathering is Oct. 16. The consensus of opinion is that the government will forbid it. The general uneasiness is reflected on the bourse. There has been a marked depression in prices.

RAILWAYS TIED UP

France Confronted by Strike of All Railroad Employees.

Paris, Oct. 12.—At 1 o'clock this morning the National Confederation of Railway Unions voted in favor of a general strike on all the railway systems, to become effective immediately. About 300,000 men are involved.

The food markets resemble those of a besieged town. Meat and vegetables are very scarce and milk brings a famine price. The government is taking measures to supply the city with provisions.

Do You Get Up With a Lame Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish in overcoming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.

When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Home of Swamp-Root, Binghamton, N.Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N.Y., on every bottle.
